This year's most inspiring winner Camp Jabulani, in Hoedspruit, South Africa. It evolved from a single wildlife research center into a top safari lodge, with endangered-species conservation as its mission—an example of a successful business founded on the right values. One green trip you're dying to book Owner Zita Cobb's enthusiasm for Newfoundland's Fogo Island Inn and the island's unique cultural heritage is infectious. I already have my tickets. What's the easiest way to make a difference when traveling? Choose the right company to travel with. T+L's 2013 Global Vision Award winners are a good place to start. Follow her on Twitter @afarles.

The quintessential European inn, in three words Personal. Polished. Relaxed. What was your favorite stop of the trip? It doesn't get any better than a breakfast of freshly baked breads and pastries and Italian coffee in Quartopiano B&B's beautiful kitchen, with a view across Modena, Italy's rooftops and steeples. Meal worth flying back for Bratwurst, Rösti, and beer, and the Matterhorn outside your window, at Restaurant Findlerhof in Zermatt, Switzerland. Inns are best for... Anyone who enjoys being a houseguest. What's next? A design pilgrimage to Helsinki, then back to Switzerland, my new favorite country. Follow him on Twitter @stephendrucker.

Mumbai 101 The Taj Mahal Palace hotel's drivers are incredible guides and can show you a whole new side of the city. They brought us to Thieves Market, with its stalls of antiques. It was such an experience. How do you best capture the city? There are so many Mumbais—so many layers. We especially love taking portraits. When we visited Horniman Circle Garden downtown to watch a cricket match, the teams were dressed head-to-toe in blue or white. Photographing the uniforms and nearby architecture felt like capturing another era. In the news We recently opened our own gallery, Galería Ermita, in Zacatecas, Mexico. Follow Trujillo on Instagram @joaquintrujillo.

Which of the European villages you visited was your favorite? It's a toss-up between Vals, Switzerland—I had wanted to visit Peter Zumthor's Hotel Therme Vals for some years—and Modena, the birthplace of Enzo Ferrari. Coziest spot Après-ski drinks at Olympia Stübli, a bar overlooking the Matterhorn. Hotels versus inns: which do you prefer? I think an inn will always win me over. It's more intimate and homey. Trip's most interesting character Ruth, the quad-bike-riding co-owner of Brücke 49, fashion designer, innkeeper, and fantastic chef!

Finnish touch Helsinki was more than I anticipated. The architecture are idiosyncratic, often folkloric, struck by how people are there had an intelligence and their attitude of "of course I would love you." The perk there involves on a bike, starting port-side farms and zigzagging city. Where to go by Eat & Joy, in shopping center can put together of local special. you weren't a you'd be... A. I'm launching Studio, an interior studio, with my Eve Ashcraft.

Even the most remote landscape needs defending these days. The primary mission for our winners: introduce travelers to endangered places, while plowing the profits back into conservation. It's a simple plan, but one that requires perfect execution to create a destination that's both appealing and protected.

Patagonia Sur Reserves

CHILE

← What It Is A for-profit conservation company with two low-impact lodges and a goal of protecting southern Chile's wilderness. How It Works Patagonia Sur uses tourism to its properties to support and showcase its innovative environmental efforts. A reforestation program—the largest in Chile—plants native-species trees (500,000 and counting) on both its own reserves and in national parks. These trees will eliminate an estimated half a million tons of carbon dioxide over the course of their lifetime—offsetting the equivalent emissions of 10,000 average U.S. households. In addition, Patagonia Sur's foundation provides English-language education, economic development programs, and sustainable jobs to nearby villagers—recognizing the essential link between conservation and community. Take the Trip See Patagonia's ancient lenga forests and wild pampas on a horseback ride through the Valle California reserve. Runner-Up
Camp Jabulani

HOEDSPRUIT,
SOUTH AFRICA

A family-run safari lodge on a private reserve near Kruger National Park, Camp Jabulani keeps wildlife stewardship at its heart. Its Hoedspruit Endangered Species Center rehabilitates at-risk animals and reintroduces them into the bush, while the six-suite lodge helps fund local land conservation and zoological research.

Take the Trip

See the bush—and the Southern Hemisphere stars on an evening elephant-back safari. campjabulani.com. $$$$$

Runner-Up
Bushman's Kloof Wilderness Reserve & Wellness Retreat

CLANWILLIAM,
SOUTH AFRICA

Intent on restoring its 18,500 acres to their original state, this luxury resort has been replacing the area's alien species with indigenous ones and saving endemic populations, such as the Cape mountain zebra, from the brink of extinction.

Take the Trip

Visit between July and October to catch one of the world's most diverse wildflower displays. bushmanskloof.co.za. $$$$
