

Camp Jabulani: Saving the World

Camp Jabulani's Managing Director, Adine Roode, was awarded a World Savers award at the Conde Nast Traveler's 4th annual World Savers Congress in Singapore where she received her award and took a seat at the discussion panel. Camp Jabulani is strongly committed to the environment through its sustainable energy and recycling policies, extensive educational programmes and implementation of multiple pioneering environmental and conservation programmes. Camp Jabulani has set the benchmark for elephant-back safari operations in South Africa and is the only safari camp in the world to offer a night-time elephant-back safari. The Hoedspruit Endangered Species Centre, its sister property, offers unique education and training programmes allowing guests and day visitors alike to get involved in a practical approach to conservation and wildlife.
